"The 2023 Short List offers an excellent overview of the Richmond music scene and its endless wonder," said Newlin executive director Doug Nunnally. "Each of the 20 albums on this list has a unique and memorable voice that has helped add to the rich music history in Virginia's capital city. Nearly 200 albums were nominated for this year's award, showing the musical depth Richmond has to offer. Consider these 20 albums a personal invitation from the Newlin jury to learn all about the exciting music that was created in your hometown."

The short list was chosen from albums released by artists in the Richmond-Petersburg metropolitan area in 2022 that either exceeded 25 minutes in length or contained at least five songs. All albums released under these parameters were considered for the award. There was no submission process or entry fee required from local musicians, labels, or studios.

A jury of more than 80 musicians, journalists, artists, photographers, and activists nominated albums for this award. From there, a 12 member committee reviewed the nominations and determined the official Short List of 20 albums. Each member of the jury will now review the 20 records and submit a ranked ballot which will be used to determine the winner.

There is also a public fan vote open from February 13 until March 17 at NewlinMusicPrize.com, valid for one vote per e-mail address. Results of the fan vote will count as one ballot towards the final result.

Modeled after similar awards such as Canada's Polaris Music Prize and the United Kingdom's Mercury Prize, the goal of the Newlin Music Prize is to raise awareness of the diverse music scene in Richmond, Virginia and to encourage more great recordings in the future. The inaugural award in 2022 was won by McKinley Dixon for the album For My Mama And Anyone Who Look Like Her.
